 Osaka Garden Rededicated in Goodwill

The gate of Osaka Japanese Garden in Jackson Park

Japan's Phoenix Pavilion (shown in the photo) was built on Wooded Island in present-day Jackson Park. Among the millions of visitors was young architect Osamu Goshima.

The history of the Osaka Garden goes back to the World's Columbian Exposition held in 1893.

Turn Your Nervousness to Positive Energy Principal Trombone Megumi Kanda

Megumi Kanda is principal trombone player at the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra and the first woman who won the principal trombone position in major orchestras in the U.S. Everyone experiences nervousness when they perform on stages or in front of large audiences and was selected from 100 players.

She generously disclosed her keys to win auditions saying, "Make a list what you have to do and read it again and again. Doing so can concentrate on your job." Ninety players were eliminated in the first round of audition at MSO, then three players were left in the second round, and finally Kanda was chosen. Later, she noted that the conductor had preferred a male player because the position was first stand. However, the conductor welcomed Kanda and said, "I need you."

How were Kanda's trombone skills developed? In 1973, Kanda was born in Tokyo to an American mother and Japanese father who is a revered and a special envoy.
